READING PACKAGE
FOR
DCI 5 NOVEMBER MEETING AT STATE

AGENDA

I. Protecting Classified Information

Briefing will review principal programs to protect classified information in our embassies overseas. This includes review of equipment and personnel focussed on countering technical hostile intelligence activity; how security engineers operate at posts; monitoring systems and programs that assist in detecting technical attacks; description of standards for storing classified information, and a description of the core chancery/FSN replacement program recently implemented in Eastern Europe.

- Clark Dittmer, Director of Diplomatic Security
- Greg Bujac, Director of Security Technology

II. Protecting Personnel from Hostile Intelligence

Briefings for this section review our personnel security programs and related standards (when and why clearances are suspended or revoked). This section also reviews the Department's counter-intelligence program, designed to deter, detect and neutralize hostile intelligence efforts directed at Department personnel world-wide.

- Clark Dittmer, Director of Diplomatic Security
- Ray Mislock, Director of State's CI Program

III. Protecting Our Buildings During Construction

This section reviews the construction security program mandated by the Omnibus Diplomatic Security act, describing security during the design and construction process (secure plans, secure transit and storage cleared American guards on site).

- Marvin Doig, Director of State's Physical Security Programs

IV. Protecting Our Personnel/Facilities Against Terrorism and Violence

This section reviews our physical security program and physical security standards designed to protect our embassies against terrorist attack and criminal violence, our residential security program; security awareness training for personnel assigned to high threat posts; the Antiterrorism Assistance Program which provides limited training to foreign law enforcement personnel; and the work of the Overseas Advisory Council (OSAC).

- Clark Dittmer, Director of Diplomatic Security
- Marvin Doig, Director of State's Physical Security Programs

V. Making Sure We Meet Our Standards

This section is designed to bring the whole program together, making the point that an effective security program must be carefully planned, implemented by professionally trained officers and constantly monitored. The section reviews the process of setting standards -- stressing the involvement of other agencies in that process, the role of the Regional Security Officer overseas and the Inspection Process. We have asked Sherman Funk to conclude this section with a description of his own independent inspection process.

- Clark Dittmer, Director of Diplomatic Security
- Sherman Funk, Inspector General
